tal and telegraph employees—the "Union of German Officials' Associations" is calling especial attention in these days to the extraordinary "child poverty" in German officialdom.

This poverty, which is particularly to be deplored at the present time, is largely due, it is declared, to the long training periods new necessary, which make it all but impossible for officials to marry until they are in their late twenties or even thirty years old. In consequence, officials have and have had for years, smaller families than almost any other branch of employees in Germany.
